NOTE TO JUDGES: This family – or garden if you will – of logos all feature an organic, hand-drawn style of illustration inspired by the master National Tropical Botanical Gardens logo. The logo for each specific garden showcases a plant or tree with deep meaning to its location and history. Logos also share a circular design and achieve harmony in colors when seen as a whole.

EXTERIOR SIGNAGE

Welcome to The Kampong

Enter a botanical garden in the heart of Coconut Grove. Did you know "kampong" means village? Dr. David Fairchild, the famous plant explorer who used to live here, named the garden for the villages he encountered in Malaysia.

Today, we are a botanical garden and community space that invites you to deepen your relationship with plants.

Come and explore a world of tropical plants, rich history, and ongoing discovery!

The Kampong

Five Gardens. One Mission.

The National Tropical Botanical Garden perpetuates tropical plants, ecosystems, and cultural heritage. We envision a future where flourishing relationships are restored between people, plants, and place.

Help us grow a brighter tomorrow! As a nonprofit organization, we depend on supporters like you! Become a member and join our five gardens. When you do, you help restore ecosystems and nourish communities through the power of plants.

MERCHANDISE

Welcome to the National Tropical Botanical Garden

We work across five botanical gardens and throughout the tropics to grow a brighter tomorrow for plants and all they sustain. We do so through a biocultural approach, where Indigenous knowledge, community priorities, and scientific research guide our path forward. Together, we will restore flourishing relationships between plants, people, and places.
